I've been fortunate to receive fantastic training – from my undergraduate days at Princeton, through NYU medical school, to a position as an assistant team physician for the New York Mets. For the last three years, I've been equally lucky to practice at North Adams Regional Hospital. Here, I get state-of-the-art medical facilities, paired with an ability to develop real and lasting relationships with my patients. It's the best of both worlds – 21st century medicine with a small-town touch. Whenever possible, I'll do arthroscopic surgery, a minimally-invasive technique that uses tiny incisions. The result is fast recovery with less discomfort. Frequently, my patients are able to return home that day. As for baseball? As the team physician for the North Adams SteepleCats, I'm now proud to be keeping the home team healthy!
